AN UNPRECEDENTED BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

Most people reading this won't remember the homebuilding boom of post-WW2 Canada. The building supply industry grew by leaps and bounds. New products, including the gussets that held roof trusses together, were brought to market, allowing roof trusses to be made offsite. Drywall replaced plaster because it could be installed ten times faster.

Everything about the modern industry that supplies residential contractors today was a product of that homebuilding boom of the 1950s.

Well, it will be the 1950s for this industry once again. We need half as many housing starts as we are currently producing in this country to house our rapidly expanding population.

It's been called a housing crisis. Which it is. But it's a business opportunity for the contractor dealer and their suppliers.

That's why we are launching Pro Dealer magazine—and its digital newsletters. We will provide the industry with the information it needs during the extraordinary boom times of the immediate future. If you want us to cover some specific angle of your pro business, send me an email at the address at right.
